Vols. 6-13 include issues of the Bulletin of the Legal Aid Society of Chicago. Excerpt from A Compilation of the Laws of Illinois, Relating to Township Organization and Management of County Affairs: With Numerous Forms, and Notes of Instructions, Supported by Adjudicated Cases, Opinions of the Attorney General, and Rulings of the Auditor of Public Accounts A new feature of this compilation is the addition, in an Appendix, of a brief summary of the rules of parliamentary law, for the benefit of town meetings and boards of supervisors. Efficiency can never be expected in any deliberative body where parliamentary rules are disregarded. In Other words, where such rules are not properly observed. Hence a study and proper understanding of these rules is necessary on the part of every member of the board of supervisors and every elector who ex peets to attend and take part in the town meeting. This feature there fore renders the book of increased value. The extent of the increase of matter from late legislation and decisions, is shown in the fact that over one hundred pages are necessarily added to, the present edition of this work, thereby increasing the size of the book nearly one-fourth from that of the former edition. The growth of our Township Organization system, which is now fully adjusted to our general statutes, has, at this time, reached that point that the laws bearing on that subject comprise a large portion of the statutes, embodying, among other subjects, in addition to the Township Organiza tion Act, Roads and Bridges, Drains and Ditches, Fences, Township In surance, Paupers, Revenue, Elections, and Regulation of Animals Run. Ning at Large, all tending still more to increase the necessity for a compilation of this kind in a separate volume, the utility of which is enhanced by the addition of notes and forms, rendering it a complete and convenient hand-book of the law on the subject embraced. The plan and scope of this compilation will be best understood by ref erence to the table of contents following. Not illustrated. 1913 edition. Excerpt: ... work incidental to public worship, the purpose for which the church proper is used, but the primary purpose of the parsonage is to furnish living rooms for the minister, and any other use of it is incidental thereto. Since July 1st, 1909, the legislative enactments relative to school and church exemptions have been changed. They now read: "First--All lands donated by the United States for school purposes, not 5" 0" l?1$Ed. all property of schools. including the real estate on which the schools are located, not leased by such schools or otherwise used with a view to profit. "Second--All property used exclusively for religious purposes, or used exclusively for school and religious purposes and not leased or otherwise used with a view to profit." Under the law as thus changed it appears: _ (1) As to schools, that the legislature has now exceeded its power. People '11. Deutsche Gemeinde, Z49 Ill. 135. Its power as given by the constitution, is to exempt "property used for school purposes." "Property of schools" conceivably may be pr0'1't)' altogether different. In fact property may be used for SCI'100l purposes and yet not be property of schools, whereas, on the other hand, it may be property of schools and never be used for school purposes in any sense of the term., _ (2) As to churches, the amended provision follows the, . ZOISi1tutional provision except that property used for school and church purposes together, is exempted. There is also the restl'1cents_t1" against its use with a view to profit. The question thus arises: What effect, if any, has this amendment, to enlarge the scope of exemption as in force under the prior enactment? The prior enactment exempts Excerpt from Illinois Law Review, Vol. 15: 1920-1921 Introduction: Articles 1-10. In these provisions forming as they do the background for the other more detailed regulations of the code, there are certain strong Roman doctrines, some less so and some of only a shadowy likeness. Of the first class is paragraph 8, which provides, in the words of the Digest, ' that on him who asserts lays the burden of proof.
